twisting street of many queer characters has gone into mourning.

So far as he is known to the outside world, "Chuck" Connors's reputation is based on an ancient play which he expected to be named after him, but which was given an entirely different title. In his own balliwick in which he lived for 61 years, "Chuck" persunded himself and tried to persunde the rest of the world that he was a typical Boweryite. As a matter of fact, he was nothing of the sort. He was nover seen in a fight and curiously enough for a man of his reputation he was always the first to escape when one started. Despite his quaint and invited chaims for lawlessness, he naver gave the police any trouble and his friends asserted at his funeral that he had never been in fait. The real name of this quaint character, who numbered his friends on every side by the thousand, was Patrick O'Connor, but he dropped it for the more picturesque one which figured so often in newspaper stories. The demise of Big Tim Sullivan when that occurs may produce a more largely attended funeral, out the death of "Chuck" Connors not only removes the best liked man on the Bowery but a character, known to newspaper men all over the country as well.

landa has been called the reigning beauty of southern Europe.
As would be imagined, the wedding gifts are fabulous. Their value is esti-mated close to $3,000,000. The kaiser's gift to his daughter consists of a number of articles, among them jewelry of his own designing; many German cities appropriated sums rangine from $5000 to $50,000 for the purchase of gifts. The great courts of Europe sent costly and beautiful presents. Usually in marriage, the wedding gifts are supposed to be shared equally by the bride and groom, but in the imperial marriage today prince Ernst gets one gift of which the bride shares no part.

for nearly three years, and in spite of the repeated assertions in anti-government quarters that it is purely a mar-riage for the sake of politics, those in court eircles say that real love enters into the match. Pictures have been printed of the engaged pair walking holding hands.

Another important feature of the marriage is the opportunity it has given the various European rulers to meet for conferences on international affairs. In fact, the conclave has been termed the greatest peace gathering of many years. Many issues which the Balkan war left are being smoothed out.

The bride's full name is Victoria Louise

Adelheid Mathilde Charlotte Hohenzel-lern, princess of Prussia, and she was born in the Potsdam palace, September 13, 1892, fulfilling a fond wish of her parents, for the airendy had six sons. The quarrel between the two houses has lasted 47 years. The blind king George V. of Hanover maintained his ight to the Hanoverian throne after Prussia annexed his kingdom, and was sent into exile. The duke of Cumberland (father of the groom) swore at his dying father's bedside in Paris that he would never become reconciled to the grown of Prassia, and would never renounce his rights to the throne of Hanover. But love and diplomacy found a way even if Cupid is presumed to be blind and diplomacy moves with ponderous steps with absolutely no trace of sentiment.

The German people believe that their beloved princess has married the man she loves. They do not believe for a moment that the princess would even consider a betrothal as a matter of state, and they do not believe that the empress would permit of such a thing any more than the princess would consider it.

In view of the fact that the princess and prince had met but twice the announcement of the betrothal those who assert their belief in the love match theory say that it must have been a case of love at first sight, and as evidence of the absurdity of the suggestion that it was a marriage of state out that without doubt the kniser could have made a much more advantageous match for his daughter had diplomacy

"The little one shall be happy. She shall not be sacrificed to politics," said the kaiser not long since. The people of Germany believe that their emperor has adhered to that policy.

Prince Ernst met his wife of today the for the first time at a royal ten party on in Berlin. They were together for about in two hours and did not meet again until some time later at a formal court func-tion, when they exchanged but a few words. Shortly after that the betrothal was announced.

Following the announcement the prince and princess were seen together a great deal in Berlin. From all appearances they were deeply in love with each other, for neither has eyes for others when together. They were photographed upon the streets of Berlin walking arm in arm, and even holding hands, as is the custom here when a couple is engaged.

Start Them Off Right with a Good Laxative and Then Walch Their Diet.

Mothers are often unconsciously very careless about the diet of their children. forcing all to eat the same foods. The fact is that all foods do not agree alike with different persons. Hence, avoid what seems to constipate the child or to give it indigestion, and urge it to take more of what is quickly digested. If the child shows a tendency to constipation it should immediately be given a mild laxative to help the bowels. By this is not meant a physic or purgative, for these abould never be given to children, nor abything like salts, pills, etc. What the child requires is simply a small doze of the gentlest of medicines, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Popeln, which in the opinion of theusands of watchful methors is the ideal remedy for any child showing a tendency to constipation.
